TOURS AVAILABLE

Cal Trade Welding School

provides employers worldwide with certified welders.

Individuals interested in making welding a career have enormous opportunity for employment, locally and in the bay area, due to the construction industries demand for certified welders.

Cal-Trade Welding School has on-going relationships with many employers, both in and outside of Stanislaus County, ensuring successful placement and job security for their graduates

In the last five years, demand for certified welders has far exceeded Northern California's current supply thus ensuring the success of Cal-Trade's lifetime job placement assistance program for the graduates.

Student's achieving proficiency in the numerous welding processes acquire up to four (or more) welding certifications. Employers worldwide accept certifications issued at Cal-Trade Welding School. This enables individuals to relocate with certified skills that are in demand.

As a certified welder you can expect wages ranging from $20 to $60 an hour or more, with great benefit packages.

The employment is in most cases year round with good possibilities for advancement.

Cal-Trade Welding School provides hands-on welding training and classroom instruction that include mathematics for welders and blueprint reading. Student's preparing for their GED have tutoring in general education along with their regular welding curriculum. One-on-one instruction and counseling is available to each student.
